

ABSTRACT

A packing member includes a recessed accommodating part for accommodating an object to be packed, and the accommodating part has a slope
5 in such a manner that its opening area increases upward from a bottom. A worker can remove the object by pulling it laterally using the slope, so that the worker can remove the object from the packing member without raising the object upward. As a result, the packing member having efficient workability of removing the object can be realized.